Prominent Old Soldiers Dies.

Captain Leland Hathaway, one of Clark county's most prominent citizens, died Saturday morning after an illness of only a few days of pneumonia. Captain Hathaway was in his seventy-sixth year. He was first taken with a severe cold about the first of the week, but was not considered in a serious condition until Thursday night, when he called in a physician and it was found that it had developed into pneumonia.

Captain Hathaway was a fine old gentleman, brave and fearless in time of war, gentle and courteous in times of peace. He was a prominent ex-Confederate soldier, having served as Adjutant in the Fourteenth Kentucky regiment during the civil war.

In the year 1865, when President Jefferson Davis was taken prisoner in Georgia, he was one of his guards and this fact was often proudly referred to by him in giving a history of his service in the Confederate army.

He took a keen interest in all the organizations of the old soldiers of his army and was past commander of John S. Williams Confederate Camp and one of the original trustees of the Kentucky Confederate Home.

His wife was Miss Martha Wheeler of Clark county and to them was born one child, Miss Carrie Lee Hathaway, who survives him. The funeral services were held at the first Christian church, Winchester, at 2:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon, Rev. J. H. McNeill officiating, and the burial took place in the Winchester cemetery under the auspices of the Confederate Veterans.

Vain Sacrifice.

Apocryphal examinations and their terrors, the secretary of the department of education of New York told at a dinner an odd story of a young African prince.

"This prince," said the secretary, "entered Yale or Harvard—I forget which—and amused himself with motorcars and bulldogs till examination time drew near. Examination time frightened the young prince horribly. He began to study, and he cabled home to the king his father:

"Examination next week. Most difficult. Implore aid of gods in my behalf."

"A few days later this reply came back from the barbarous west coast monarch:

"Rites performed. Fourteen picked youths, all sons of nobles, have been sacrificed. Omens propitious."

"Yet, would you believe it," the secretary concluded, "the young prince flunked."

One Soul.

Could any little lamp, though lifted high,
Lighten the void abysses of the sky?

Could a faint rose leaf blown into the sea
Perfume the oceans of immensity?

Could one chord sound in melody so far
That all space echoed to the farthest star?

And yet your soul amid the infinite
Makes all a fragrant harmony of light!

—Charles Buxton Goring in Century.

Mother Was to Blame.

Jock and Annie were to get married, and she had confided to him that her age was twenty. After the ceremony and festivities were over they both went home and retired for the night. Annie's mother resided next door and, being up early the following morning, thought she would give the happy couple a "rap up."

On the way to their door she suddenly remembered it was Annie's birthday. Knocking loudly at the door, she bawled out:

"Come away, Annie! Get up! Ye ken ye're thirty today."

Jock, who was the first to hear the voice, astonished his mother-in-law by shouting:

"For goodness' sake, get up, Annie, for we've slept ten years."

A Mean Trick.

A lawyer in a London court, defending a promissory note, went to lunch, leaving his books and citations on the table in the courtroom. The opposing counsel sneaked back into the room and changed the places of all his book-marks. In the afternoon the lawyer, taking up his books, referred the court to his authorities. His lordship noted every volume and page carefully and took the case under consideration. In rendering his opinion he said:

"I was inclined after hearing argument of counsel for defendant to non-suit plaintiff, but I find after referring to the authorities quoted by counsel none of them bear on this case, and I am led to think that the gentleman has been willfully trying to insult the court. He has referred me to an action of an Irishman who sued the proprietor of a monkey for damages for biting him, to a case of arson, one of burglary, two of petty larceny and three divorce cases, none of which bears on an action to recover on a promissory note. Perhaps the grossest insult to the court is referring to 'Duckworth versus Boozymann,' an action charging defendant with breach of promise. Judgment for plaintiff with costs."

The lawyer never knew what the matter was and to this day thinks the judge was out of his mind.

The Finisher.

On board one of England's warships a marine who had said he was by trade a piano finisher was employed with the carpenter's crew.

One day the carpenter was sent for and asked if he could repair a hole in the veneer of the wardrobe piano, which had been burnt by an officer laying down on it a lighted cigar. Of course he recommended the said marine, who was at once sent for.

Somewhat, however, work did not seem to progress, and, being taxed with the delay, Joe said:

"But this job is not in my line, sir."

"Not in your line?" was the reply.

"But you said you were a piano finisher."

"Yes, so I was, sir," said he, "but the very last job on the piano is the taking of it home."

The Way to Happiness.

To look fearlessly upon life; to accept the laws of nature; not with meek resignation, but as her sons, who dare to search and question; to have peace and confidence within our souls—these are the beliefs that make for happiness. —Maeterlinck.

The Poet's Retort.

Joaquin Miller was once overtaken by a countryman, who gave him a long ride. Tired at length of conversation, the poet took a novel from his pocket.

"What are you reading?" said the countryman.

"A novel of Bret Harte's," said Mr. Miller.

"Well, now, I don't see how an immortal being wants to be wasting his time with such stuff."

"Are you quite sure," said the poet, "that I am an immortal being?"

"Of course you are."

"If that is the case," responded Miller, "I don't see why I need be so very economical of my time."

The Kentucky State Grange.

The Kentucky State Grange convened in this city Tuesday morning for a two day's session, with about one hundred delegates in attendance. Mr. F. P. Wilcott, of Covington, Master of the State organization, called the Grange to order and presided at its meetings.

The executive committee, composed of L. H. Boshel, of Union City, chairman; G. D. Karsner, of Lexington; D. D. Robbins, of Richmond; J. M. Utz, of Union City, and G. W. Florence, of Cynthiana, came in advance and held a meeting at the Windsor Hotel on Monday night and made out the program for the two day's session.

The Hon. Mortimer Whitehead, of New Jersey, on Tuesday afternoon, at the open session, delivered an address upon the order and explained in clear and forcible manner its benefits and purposes.

Mr. Karsner, of Fayette county, a prominent farmer of the Blue Grass, exhibited a display of small grains such as wheat, rye, barley, oats, clover and alfalfa, the collection being the same which took the premium at the State Fair in Louisville.

The Corn and Tobacco Show, under the auspices of the Paris Commercial Club, in charge of Secretary B. F. Adcock, in the basement of the court house, proved to be an interesting feature of the meeting of the Grange. There was a fine display of corn, tobacco, hemp, and other products of the Bourbon county farms. It was a decided success in every way.

Secretary Adcock, for the Commercial Club, is indebted to the following liberal citizens and business houses for their contributions to the cash premiums awarded at the show:

THEATRICAL."THE PRINCESS OF PATCHES."

—A play that has won singular, cordial and unanimous endorsement all last season, in both large and small cities throughout the east is the production of "The Princess of Patches" to be given at the Paris Grand to night, Oct. 28, matinee and evening. It is a comedy drama of the South by Mark E. Swan, the author of over twenty-five very successful plays. It treats of the chivalry and hospitality of a Southern gentleman towards a friendly child. All the characters are well drawn, and the tender sentiment, and bright humorous sayings, makes this a particularly welcome play. There are some picturesque stage settings, including several that are novel.
